

Spelling list: double consonants

split double consonants to divide the syllables

|          |   |
|----------|---|
| waffle   | Do you prefer pancakes or waffles for breakfast?                            |
| follow   | Don't follow me, I'm lost.   |
| yellow   | Yellow is the color of corn.   |
| pillow   | A pillow is a cushion used to support the head of a sleeping person. |
| essay    | Have you finished your essay yet?                                    |
| balloon  | I brought a helium balloon to the party.                             |
| tissue   | There is no tissue in the bathroom.                                  |
| lesson   | His favourite lesson is Spanish.                                     |
| messy    | This classroom is messy .  |
| fully    | I don't fully understand how to multiply fractions.                  |
| scissors | Good scissors need to be kept sharp.                                 |
| fluffy   | Her jumper was made of luxurious, fluffy wool.                       |
| ruffle   | The seamstress added a ruffle to my dress.                           |
| office   | I'll call your office to say you are sick.                           |
| suffix   | Can you identify the suffix at the end of this word?                 |
| muffin   | May I have a blueberry muffin please.                                |
| silly    | Kiarra made a silly face.  |
| assist   | Will you assist me with these boxes please?                          |
| offer    | Tom was selfish not to offer me a lift.                              |

affect

The government cuts will affect everyone.